Cultural Caravan TV proudly presents a treasured flashback episode which will highlight the life and times of one of the most brilliant African American inventors of our time, Lewis H. Latimer. This episode shares little known facts about Lewis Latimer, a self-taught man who worked with the most renowned inventors of his day, such as Thomas Edison and Hiram Maxim. He is known for developing the carbon filament that enhanced the light bulb and much more. Cultural Caravan TV will provide you with an informative spotlight which will also feature rare footage about the life and legacy of this 20th century Renaissance man. We would also like to recognize his grand-daughter, Dr. Winifred Latimer Norman, who dedicated her life to the preservation of her grand-parents' home and legacy. Dr. Norman passed last year at the age of 99. She will be featured in this historic broadcast. Join us for another insightful and educational episode.
