You may have missed this wonderful episode of Cultural Caravan TV's "Celebration of Children and Families Show - Part 2," last week, but you can find it and other past episodes producer Louise Dente's great line up of caravan of educational and entertaining segments at her www.ccptv.org website.

"We believe that our children learn best by doing," Ms. Dente, founder and Executive producer of Cultural Caravan Productions, Inc., told us. "The reveals how adults play pivotal roles in passing down traditions and culture to children. It also shows how this important tradition can be done in these contemporary times."

It was hosted by Olabisi Adams, age 12 and featured Tracy Pierre and daughter, Harmony, discussing their exciting cultural exchange tour of China. The segment includes a new dance presentation inspired by their experiences. Also, nine-year-old twins, Allahna and Anjali Johnson made their debut on the show with a dance and vocal presentation.

There are other surprises chocked in this wonderful segment: viewers see Dr. William Seraile, the noted scholar, introducing his granddaughters to creative storytelling techniques. Ms. Dente shares folktales and introduces the Kiswahili Number song, in honor of the late Yusuf Waliyaya. Dja Dja Meday provides fitness tips with 12-year-old Kweli Dente.

Cultural Caravan usually airs Sundays, 5:30pm on Channel 25 and Channel 22 on NYC-Life.

This episode was the second one of its type although Cultural Caravan has presented many children's specials in the past. Ms. Dente says, "We want to ensure that an episode dedicated to children and or families is presented to viewers at least once each year

Good news! This particular episode will air exclusively in Brooklyn, the Bronx and Queens within the next few weeks. A
